

A little over a week ago, we experienced a situation in which there appeared to have been a security breach here at our church facility. We discovered that someone, using the church phone number, had placed several calls to people in another part of the state during the middle of the night. Deb, who was here when we first found out about this, did some quality sleuth work and then we followed up with the police. For the time being, things seem to be resolved. However, our situation and all that happened suggests the extent to which we as people become intently focused on security and security issues. All we need do is listen to the daily news or read posted news stories, and we will inevitably hear about issues and concerns regarding global security, national security, security within our community, security in our homes and our own personal security. Security issues are such an important part of our lives that they have created big business. Security is used as a marketing tool for cars, tires, homes, internet resources, investment banking, politics, travel – the list goes on and on. Every security answer is marketed by use of a thirty-second elevator speech that fits into a commercial for the sole purpose of getting us to invest in the product being sold. Everyone is interested in keeping us safe. Cell phones, security systems, airport security lines, getting the right medical tests before or after the age of 50 – just about everything can be sold as a way to keep us free from threat, a way to keep us safe. And, while I do not want to minimize the need for security, I do want to suggest this incessant focus adds to the fear and anxiety that permeates our culture and our very lives.

Well, in the last chapters of Matthew's gospel, we find people who were fearful and intently focused on security and security issues. Security seems to be on everyone's mind. When Jesus was betrayed, it was temple security personnel armed with swords and clubs who came to arrest him. As this happened, the disciples sought their security in the cover of darkness, deserting Jesus and fleeing the garden. Peter sought security and safety in that courtyard by trying to keep a safe distance from Jesus while following what happened to him during his trial. And, after Jesus was safely dead, the chief priests felt this immense need for security and asked Pilate to place guards at the sealed tomb where Jesus' body was laid to rest. So, Pilate told his security detail – the soldiers – to “make that tomb as secure as you can,” as he placed twenty-four hour guards to keep watch.

Well, guess what! It did not work and it does not work! It did not work for Peter who ended up denying Jesus three times. And, it did not work for the chief priests who tried to secure and seal Jesus in a tomb. It did not work because Jesus, the Word made flesh, cannot be contained. All attempts at achieving security were shattered when the very foundations of the earth shook. And, by a power greater than all attempts to achieve security, Jesus was raised!

When the very foundations of the earth shook as tectonic plates shifted, even Pilate's security detail fell to the ground in fear. As the soldiers become like dead men, grounded in fear, Mary Magdalene and the other Mary are greeted by the angel who says, "Don't be afraid. I know that you are looking for Jesus who was crucified. He is not here; for he has been raised, as he said. Come, see the place where he lay. Then go quickly and tell his disciples, 'He has been raised from the dead, and indeed he is going ahead of you to Galilee; there you will see him.' This is my message for you."

The women then go, and what is so interesting is that they leave the tomb with fear and joy! While they are joyful, an element of fear has not left them and they apparently do not exactly feel secure and safe. You see, they are living an experience in which the very foundation of the earth under their feet has shaken them to the core. Their dear friend who was dead has not stayed dead! Talk about not feeling secure and safe! And, as they run to tell the disciples, who should run into them but Jesus.

Jesus, their risen Lord stands before them and says to them, “Do not be afraid.” They encounter the risen Christ and hear him say, “Do not be afraid,” and it is the very last time in Matthew’s gospel that we hear anything about fear.

As the women encounter the risen Christ, it becomes very clear to them that reality itself had changed. The Rev. Dr. Mary Hinkle Shore describes this change in the women and all of Jesus’ disciples by saying:

As the first Christians came to recognize the risen Christ, they experienced boldness and freedom of speech that surprises those of us who read their stories. It is as if their security came from the inside out. They were not afraid of people who scoffed at their claims. They were not afraid of authorities who ordered them to stop speaking of Jesus. They were free from what the neighbors thought about them and free from what the established power structure could do to them.

Now, we know that the disciples did face threats and persecution following Christ’s resurrection. The history of the early church indicates many of them were killed for professing Christ as Savior and proclaiming their faith. However, after experiencing Christ’s resurrection, even the threats made against their lives by those who were in power did not own them or define them. Fear no longer defined the way they lived or their proclamation of the good news. And, what is so amazing is that even all of the mistakes they had made, all of their fear induced foolishness and prior cowardly behavior, was met by the risen Christ who did meet them in Galilee. Their encounter with the risen Christ freed them from all that had been and their reality was changed. And, even more, the risen Christ promised to be with them to the end of the age.

So, on this Easter morning, what might that kind of freedom mean for you? How does this good news free you from the fear that binds you? How does this good news change the way you hear the daily news reports? How does this good news change the way you welcome strangers and those who are different? How does this good news transform all that defines you? How does this good news transform this faith community and the way we live in the greater Lansing community and the world? The risen Christ stands before us saying, “Do not be afraid!”

Because of Easter, we know the foundation of all that once was has been shaken and God is creating a new heaven and a new earth. And, because of Easter our lives are secure and held with Christ in the very God of all creation. Do not be afraid, because we know a Savior who died on the cross to break the power of everything that threatens to enslave or oppress or distort or destroy our humanity. Do not be afraid, because of Easter we know a God who takes all our pain and sorrow and suffering and sadness and loss and even death and turns it all into new life. Do not be afraid, because of Easter we believe the new life that came into being on that early morning two thousand years ago will one day transform everything and everyone. Do not be afraid, because of Easter we believe in a God who brings hope out of hopelessness and new life out of death. Do not be afraid, because of Easter we believe in a God who is working to bring grace and peace and mercy and love and justice and freedom and joy and life into every life. Do not be afraid, because of Easter and because we believe in a God who raised Jesus from the dead, we believe that even death does not have the last word. God alone has the last word. You are secure!! We are secure!!

Do not be afraid! Because of Easter we are secure and our future is secure! For the powers of death have been defeated already and no matter how they rage and what power or authority they claim, Christ has already won the victory! Christ is Risen! He is Risen indeed! Alleluia!
